

FEED YOUR MIND WITH ROMLIFE PROGRAMS

GET FAR AND AWAY WITHOUT LEAVING TOWN

When photographer Robert Shechter and his wife, travel writer Myriam Shechter, aren't globetrotting, you'll find them at the head of the class at the ROM. As instructors for ROMLife special events and courses, they share their passion for world travel by transforming their trips—most recently to Canada's Arctic, central Europe, Russia, and Spain—into ROMLife programs.

Robert's unique series The Camera & the Gourmet combines his enthusiasms for photography, travel, and food. The Arctic Saga evening features a dinner of Arctic caribou flown in from Nunavut for the occasion. But you must register early for this course—it sells out fast. Throughout the year, Robert offers a diverse selection of other photography courses.

In addition to travel and food, Myriam Shechter loves music. Her ROMLife course Who's Afraid of Classical Music provides an encouraging format for participants making their initial forays into this seemingly complex subject.

Both Robert and Myriam are meticulous organizers and comprehensive presenters, which is reflected in the high ratings for friendly, creative, and motivating classes both receive when anonymous evaluation forms are completed at the end of every ROMLife course.

The ROM has been offering courses, special events, and lectures by dedicated instructors like Robert and Myriam Shechter to Museum Members and the public almost since the Museum's first days. In 2008, with so many new galleries and exhibitions on view, the Museum is offering an expanded array—all in aid of helping participants rediscover the joy of learning.

ROMLife offers a wide variety of lectures and courses that inform, entertain, and let you explore the worlds of nature and culture. Courses are available in the afternoon or evening, weekday or weekend. Instructors are ROM curators, teachers, and carefully selected international experts.
